What the hell am I doing here?

I'm not the editor. I haven't slaved over this thing, working my ass off with the authors, trying to get the best possible stories for my zine. I haven't picked up a phone and called any artists to see if they can squeeze in an illustration or two for me.

I'm not the authors. I haven't slaved over my story, working my ass off with the editor, trying to write the best possible story that I can. I haven't dropped an email to anyone, asking them for advice, asking them to read through the story for me one last time.

I'm not the artist. I haven't read through the stories and selected scenes to illustrate. I haven't been given scenes to illustrate. I haven't had to sit down and spend hours, if not days or weeks, working the artwork into a suitable form for publication.

So what the hell am I doing here?

I'm reading this issue of the Orion Press Voyager fanzine as I format it for publication, and I'm enjoying every minute of it. I intend to write the authors and artist and editor and proofreader as soon as I finish and tell them that. I hope that you'll give them that same courtesy.
